FITZWILLIAM COLLEGE
The Library & ITCentrewill bring together books and IT resources in an integrated centre for learning for all members of Fitzwilliam. It will be open round the clock and throughout the year, to provide the most modern facilities for group study and access to research materials, all with the support of professional staff. Designed by Edward Cullinan, RIBA Gold Medal winner in 2008, it extends the east wing of the 1959 Denys Lasdun masterplan and aims to create a place for study that reflects the peaceful landscape and respects and enhances the adjacent architecture. It will be an exciting and environmentally sensitive addition to the collection of award-winning buildings on our site.

The 150th Anniversary Campaign
RAISING £5 MILLION FOR THE LIBRARY
IS THE FIRST AND MOST URGENT GOAL OF OUR 150TH ANNIVERSARY CAMPAIGN

100% MORE READER SPACES
50% MORE COMPUTER SPACES
60,000 VOLUMES ON OPEN ACCESS

Ground floor plan (above)
South elevation (below)

The stair-tower takes readers between the library floors, and provides study alcoves at half-landing level which reveal views over the College. It culminates in the ‘nest’ level where readers can enjoy even wider views across Cambridge.

Some study spaces are allocated as permanent computer workstations and laptop use is possible throughout the library – wired and wireless IT network connections provide flexibility now and for the future.

ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT

• The building has been designed to exceed the latest building regulation requirements for energy consumption and insulation levels.
• Large north-facing windows and louvre screens maximise natural daylight while minimising solar gain.
• The ventilation strategy and the passive environmental design both minimise the building’s environmental impact – reader comfort is achieved using a fresh-air heating system with low energy consumption, to satisfy environmental requirements.

The west-facing elevation, in European oak, affords study spaces with natural side light.
