

EARLY CAREER RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP

Applications are invited for one Early Career Research Fellowship in:

Modern and Medieval Languages and Linguistics; Music; Education; Classics (Classical Languages; Classical Literature and Linguistics; Classics & Ancient History)

This Fellowship is normally tenable for three years and are open to graduates of any University who have recently completed their doctorate or are close to completion. It is intended to be early (first or second) post-doctoral positions appropriate to the start of an academic career.

Responsibilities, Remuneration and Benefits

The prime duty of a Research Fellow is to pursue research. A report on the progress of that research will be required each year and will be considered at an annual appraisal. Research Fellows are frequently invited, but not obligated, to undertake (for an additional payment) up to four hours of small group teaching per week. A mentor will be allocated throughout the period of the Fellowship.

The successful candidates will be elected to Fellowships of the College, with which certain obligations and privileges are associated; these include membership of the Governing Body of the College, the prime decision-making body which meets seven times each year. The College is an educational charity of which each Fellow is a Trustee. The appointments are subject to the Statutes and Ordinances of the College.

The 2022-2023 pensionable rates are: pre-PhD £20,092 - £22,847, post PhD £21,686 – £24,174. These rates will be reviewed annually from 2023 in line with stipends generally within the College. A stipendiary Fellow already holding an award from another organisation, such as a Research Council or similar body, will be paid a stipend from the date such an award expires. Rent-free single accommodation will be offered in College with a charge to cover services. An allowance, which is currently £3,626 is paid to any Research Fellow not resident in College, and study facilities are made available. This is a taxable benefit and further details can be obtained from the Bursar's Office. The College operates a housing loan scheme which is designed to assist Fellows with the purchase of a residential property in the Cambridge area.

Research Fellows are entitled to all meals (either lunch or dinner) at College expense whenever the kitchens are open. Up to three of these meals each week may be assigned to guests; and further meals (for the Fellow and guests) are available at the Fellow's expense. There is also a small tax-free allowance to cover out-of-pocket expenses incurred in the entertainment of students.

An annual allowance of £1,000 is provided for use for academic purposes including the purchase of books, and computing equipment or attendance at conferences. Unused allowances may be carried forward for up to two years. Additional grants may sometimes be made to assist with certain approved research expenses which are not covered by departmental, faculty or other sources.
